Editorial

The other day there was a litpartment trying on some spring dresses. Her face fairly shone with happiness and satisfaction. Childlike, she wanted every new garment she saw.

A salesperson said to the mother, who accompanied the child, "How happy your little girl looks and how easily pleased."

"No," said the mother, "it is only that she has not yet only that she has not yet learned to hide her feelings behind a mask of indifference." Wouldn't this be a better little planet on which to live it none of us had ever learned that trick? How much happier we would be and every one else if we would all show just a litle more appreciation as we

We know that nothing gives more pleasure to our salesper-sons than the many little acts of appreciation from our loyal patrons. By such is THE STORE OF GREATER SERVtravel this earth road.
